

Healthier Communities Make Healthier People

A visionary when it comes to designing healthy communities, Dick Jackson set the stage for improving the health of Americans.

At this lecture hosted by the Bloomberg American Health Initiative (BAHI), Dr. Jackson will challenge Johns Hopkins and the public health field to go beyond identifying the problems, and will outline ways we can be the voice and the muscle to transform communities in the United States for healthier children and adults.

Dick Jackson is professor of environmental health at the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA). Previously, he was director of CDC's National Center for Environmental Health.

Wed, May 3 at 1 pm

Becton Dickinson Room (W1020)

JHSPH Wolfe Street Building

615 N. Wolfe St, Baltimore, MD 21205

JOHNS HOPKINS
BLOOMBERG SCHOOL of PUBLIC HEALTH